

National Action Plan for France
Implementation of the “Women, Peace and Security” resolutions of the United Nations Security Council

I INTRODUCTION

1. The “Women, Peace and Security” agenda: adoption and implementation of Resolutions 1325, 1820, 1888 and 1889.

Women are affected by armed conflict in a number of ways: they may be both victims of violence and themselves combatants or members – voluntary or otherwise – of the armed forces. They may also potentially be actively involved in all phases of conflicts, and especially in the peace building, security sector reform (SSR) and disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration (DDR) processes, as well as in reconstruction and development policies.

On 31 October, the United Nations Security Council unanimously adopted Resolution 1325 on “Women, Peace and Security”. The resolution called for greater participation of women in conflict prevention, conflict resolution and peace building. It urged states to take the necessary steps to protect women before, during and after conflicts. It reaffirmed respect for the fundamental rights of women and girls and equal participation of women at all levels of decision-making processes as both objectives and essential instruments of conflict prevention, conflict resolution and peacebuilding.

Yet despite a major international effort to implement the recommendations of Resolution 1325, the level of violence against women, often used as an instrument of conflict and carried out systematically, remains extreme. Meanwhile, the participation of women in the peace negotiation and peace building processes and in the transitional justice, reconstruction and development processes remains insufficient.

This situation continues to call for greater international mobilisation. It is widely recognised and suggests that the protection mechanisms and the response provided, in particular by Peacekeeping Operations (PKO), continue to be inadequate and unsuitable despite the fact that this objective has been included as a central part of their mandate. It also highlights the advisability of and the need for developing new actions based on the normative arsenal and the recommendations of the United Nations Security Council – considerably reinforced since 2000 by the adoption of Resolutions 1820 (2008), 1888 (2009) and 1889 (2009) – and drawing on institutional mechanisms (particularly the Special Representative of the United Nations Secretary General on Sexual Violence in Conflict) and relevant international instruments (Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDEF/CEDAW, 1979), the platform for action of the Beijing Conference (1995), the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (1998) and the Millennium Development Goals (especially MDG 3 on gender equality and on autonomy (2000)). (see appended normative framework)

Moreover, it is necessary to recall at each stage in the drafting and implementation of protection measures that women do not constitute a homogeneous group. Their experience of armed conflicts and violence therefore calls for a differentiated response.

In 2004, the Security Council called on all Member States to draw up their own National Action Plans (NAP). The action plan set out here is a response to that appeal. Its purpose is to promote consistent implementation of the “Women, Peace and Security” resolutions in France’s international action. It also takes account of work currently under way in the European Union and the United Nations, where indicators for monitoring implementation of Resolution 1325 are being adopted.¹

This plan is being adopted in 2010, a year marked by the 15th anniversary of the Beijing Conference in conjunction with the 54th session of the Commission on the Status of Women (New York, 1-12 March 2010), and in which several major international events are taking place: ECOSOC High-Level Segment in June 2010 focused on the implementation of goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and the empowerment of women; Summit on the Millennium Development Goals on 20-22 September; 10th anniversary of UNSC Resolution 1325 in October 2010. France was actively involved in each of these events.

> Reminder of France's international and European engagement relating to the "Women, Peace and Security" issue

France has worked within the United Nations Security Council to ensure that Peacekeeping Operations (PKO) mandates systematically include gender-specific content and explicitly refer to the aforementioned resolutions.

During the French presidency of the European Union in the second half of 2008, France made combating violence against women and promoting the role of women in conflict resolution and post-conflict reconstruction its Human Rights priority. In this context, France notably worked for the adoption of the EU Guidelines on Violence against Women and Girls and Combating all Forms of Discrimination against Them. It has since been involved in the regular updates of the strategic orientations required for their implementation, in conjunction with national and European Union diplomatic representations throughout the world.

This engagement also made it possible to formalise a European Union global approach to the implementation of UNSC Resolutions 1325 and 1820. As part of its critical role in the field of European defence policy, France also initiated a revision of the operational documents of the EU's ESDP missions with a view to including protection of women in conflict situations and promoting their role in post-crisis recovery².

At the same time, France worked to secure the adoption of EU monitoring indicators for the implementation of the Beijing plan of action on "Women and Armed Conflict"³. Lastly, the EU recently adopted monitoring indicators for its global approach to Resolutions 1325 and 1820. France actively contributed to drawing up these indicators, working to ensure inclusion of access to international protection and a concrete indicator to assess EU representations to foster participation of women in peace processes and peace negotiations.

On 20 and 21 May 2010, France hosted an extraordinary meeting of the CEDAW/CEDEF Committee in Paris, which was attended by French members of parliament, representatives of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), representatives of Afghanistan (Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Independent National Commission for Human Rights, NGOs) and Haiti (United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), NGOs APROSIFA and AFASDA), and representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Interparliamentary Union. The main part of the meeting was devoted to the rights of women in crisis and post-conflict situations and to the issues of protection and the participation of women in decision-making processes. The present action plan is based on the work of the conference, which will also provide input for the discussions and contributions of the committee CEDAW/CEDEF in this field.

The French policy on promoting the rights of women and gender equality is an integral part of France's international commitments:

- it strives to fully implement the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW);
- it is based on the dual approach recommended by the Beijing Platform for Action:
 - * specific approach: corrective measures designed to correct or offset inequality;
 - * mainstreaming approach: systematic assessment, in every public decision, of the impact the decision may have on gender equality.

II OBJECTIVES OF THE NATIONAL ACTION PLAN

The ability to draw up consistent and concerted policies and strategies on women and armed conflict and to effectively translate them into action that reinforces the protection of women and promotes their equal participation in decision-making processes depends on the consultation and governance mechanisms employed. This issue cuts across many ministries and administrations. It therefore calls for inter-ministerial and inter-institutional coordination and for involvement of all stakeholders in promoting a comprehensive strategy aimed at implementing the United Nations Security Council resolutions.

The purpose of this action plan is to meet these requirements. It is based on existing actions and actions now being developed and it takes on board many existing European objectives and indicators.

The action plan takes account of the expectations of civil society⁴, which was consulted as part of its drafting (the National Consultative Commission on Human Rights was asked to submit an opinion and will be closely involved in its implementation (see below)).

The action plan aims to foster, at international level, protection of women against all forms of violence, respect for their fundamental rights and their equal participation in decision-making processes regarding peace building, reconstruction and development.

The action plan is structured in four parts:

1. Protecting women against violence and working to ensure respect for their fundamental rights
2. Participation of women in managing conflict and post-conflict situations
3. Raising awareness of respect for women's rights in training programmes
4. Developing political and diplomatic action

1. PROTECTING WOMEN AGAINST VIOLENCE AND WORKING TO ENSURE RESPECT FOR THEIR FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

General objective: To ensure that the rights of women are taken into account and effectively respected and to implement the specific protections that are needed to assist populations that are victims of armed conflict, especially refugee and internally displaced women and women in post-conflict situations.

Specific objectives:

- a. To ensure that the personal situations of women victims of an armed conflict are taken into account in the procedure for gaining access to international protection outside their country of origin, on the basis of the relevant standards⁵.
- b. to provide, in cooperation with all the relevant European and international players, specific assistance to women victims of violence (physical, sexual and psychological) during conflict and post-conflict periods as part of humanitarian aid programmes, including access to health care (including sexual and reproductive) and psychological support.
- c. To ensure protection of women against all forms of violence during post-conflict periods, by strengthening coordination of development cooperation action and resources allocated to respect for the rights of women and girls and the promotion of gender equality.

2. PARTICIPATION OF WOMEN IN MANAGING CONFLICT AND POST-CONFLICT SITUATIONS

General objective: To work to foster direct and effective participation of women in peacekeeping and security efforts and in decision-making relating to the peace building and reconstruction process.

Specific objectives:

- a. To support the participation of women in the decision-making and policy-making processes relating to reconstruction in countries affected by international or domestic armed conflict or post-crisis situations, including processes relating to traditional justice, international criminal justice and the fight against impunity.
- b. To support civil society organisations working to promote gender equality and the empowerment of women and to strengthen women's equal participation in all decision-making processes.
- c. To foster greater direct participation of women in peacekeeping missions and reconstruction operations by encouraging their access to responsibilities within the civilian and military components and to senior positions in the chain of command.

The approach taken to guarantee reinforced presence of women in External Operations (OPEX)⁶ will be progressive. It will, in particular, be based on overall inter-ministerial work consistent with the framework set out in the National Strategy for Civilian/Military Crisis Management and implementation procedures, which will be defined in close coordination with the Task Force recently set up within the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs (MAEE), together with the gender equality departments and focal points of the administrations involved.

It will in particular include a communications component and a study of the prospects offered to women in terms of deployment opportunities and conditions. It will also take account of the capacity of the reference UN and EU bodies to more frequently employ women as part of short-term expert assignments.

3. RAISING AWARENESS OF RESPECT FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS IN TRAINING PROGRAMMES.

General objective: To include issues relating to respect for women's rights and protection against all forms of violence in peacekeeping, security and security system reform training. This commitment will be based on a partnership and multi-disciplinary approach using civil society expertise.

Specific objectives:

a. To include issues relating to respect for the rights of women and gender equality in existing peacekeeping⁷ and security training.

In addition to existing training in international humanitarian law standards, protection of civilians and conditions of deployment, issues relating to the rights of women and girls and to gender equality will be included in support of a comprehensive effort to improve the training of personnel deployed in external missions, in line with the security issues in the countries of deployment⁸. The training should make it possible to:

Provide forces with a political, strategic and operational context and an interpretation of their mandate with regard to the inclusion of a gender equality perspective in the operational rules of engagement and intervention.

Reinforce codes of conduct and strict compliance by peacekeeping forces. The first requirement targets the behaviour of the forces themselves in the area of operations. Any actions on their part constituting sexual exploitation and/or violence must be identified and sanctioned (in line with the EU's zero tolerance policy)⁹.

Encourage a more comprehensive definition of the concept of security in the various mandates, in particular as regards the security and physical integrity of civilian populations, within the framework of the protection mandate. This training should make it possible to define, within the framework of each mission, a response suitable to each type of violation, depending on its nature and scale, and to facilitate prevention of such violations and access to effective redress for women victims of violence.

⁷ Conclusions of the Council on the review of the implementation by EU Member States and institutions of the Beijing Action Platform, WOMEN AND ARMED CONFLICT, 2916th session of the EMPLOYMENT, SOCIAL POLICY, HEALTH AND CONSUMER AFFAIRS Council, Brussels, 17 December 2008.

⁹ See "EU Comprehensive Approach for the Implementation of UN Security Council Resolutions 1325 and 1820 on Women, Peace and Security", adopted by the Council of the European Union on 8 December 2008

Identification of the required expertise will make it possible to adapt interventions and provide guidance for those responsible for training and the general staff of missions to ensure that this issue is addressed in a crosscutting and explicit manner.

Training available will include:

-Pre-deployment training/operational briefings as part of UN Peacekeeping Operations (PKO) and EU ESDP missions or any SSR intervention, for civilian (especially police) and military units. Training programmes must be specifically tailored to each mission, take account of the exact nature of its mandate, and be based on operational scenarios.

-Training provided by the Ecoles Nationales à Vocation régionale (ENVR, national schools with regional scope), training centres providing high-quality technical and operational training for security and defence force personnel of the host country and neighbouring countries¹⁰. Awareness raising relating to the role of women within the security forces will be included in the management training course.

On-line training will also be included.

b. To systematically include awareness raising of respect for the rights of women and girls and gender equality in our action relating to security system reform (SSR), peacekeeping and security and support for transitional justice processes.

- Include the issue of gender equality in all relevant processes relating to SSR, civilian and military crisis management operations, post-conflict management and transitional justice.

- Within this framework, encourage action to ensure respect for the rights of women and girls and to foster gender equality in disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration (DDR) programmes, particularly those relating to children associated with armed forces and groups.

c. To provide technical and financial support to encourage French-speaking countries wishing to develop expertise in this field to do so, in partnership with the International Organisation of La Francophonie (OIF) and research/training centres.

- Draw up a synopsis of the various programmes relating to the protection of women and to violence against women developed, in particular, by the International Organisation of La Francophonie (OIF) with a view to identifying possible synergies with the present action plan.

- Support the dissemination of teaching materials and the development of a French-language training programme to facilitate the inclusion of issues relating to women's rights and gender equality in awareness raising and training.

- Raise awareness among domestic security attachés and military attachés of issues relating to respect for the rights of women and girls and gender equality so as to facilitate the establishment of technical cooperation, especially in countries of UN and EU deployment and in countries in which France provides assistance for the implementation of security system reform processes.

¹⁰ ENVR centres train over 1,500 people every year on average, in fields that range from peacekeeping operations to domestic security, health care, mine clearing and administration. These schools drive regional integration and have become a key part of French cooperation policy. There are currently 15 ENVRs in eight African countries and one European country.

- Encourage States presenting candidates for the competitive examination for admission to French training establishments (ENVRs) to propose a significant proportion of women personnel.

d. To foster education in non-violence, Human Rights and peace culture in schools.

4. DEVELOPING POLITICAL AND DIPLOMATIC ACTION

General objective: To maintain strong political and diplomatic involvement in implementing the “Women, Peace and Security” agenda, especially within the European Union and the Security Council.

Specific objectives:

a. To promote the adoption of civilian protection mandates in Peacekeeping Operations with a view to improving prevention, combating violence against women and protecting victims.

b. To systematically include women’s rights and gender equality in France’s bilateral and regional dialogues on security issues (particularly with the African Union and the other regional organisations).

c. To contribute to the development and implementation of European guidelines: European Union guidelines on violence against women (evaluation and implementation of regional strategies and dialogue with third countries), monitoring of implementation indicators of the Beijing Action Platform on “Women and Armed Conflict” and the European Union’s “Women, Peace and Security” indicators (under development).

d. To support, in compliance with competence criteria, the nomination and appointment by the United Nations Secretary-General of women as representatives and special envoys in charge of missions and as Human Rights specialists employed in the field (as part of United Nations and European Union operations).

e. To support the European Union’s fight against impunity and the policy of tolerance by maintaining active support for international criminal justice (and especially the work of the International Criminal Court).

III NATIONAL ACTION PLAN FOLLOW-UP

1. Changes in the action plan

The present action plan is a living document, in which commitments cover a three-year period starting from its adoption. The plan will be regularly updated and monitored with respect to implementation of the concrete commitments it contains.

2. Regular meetings

To this end, the following approach will be taken:

- Half-yearly meetings of a steering committee, bringing together all ministries and administrations concerned, in addition to the regular meetings required for the implementation of particular objectives contained in the action plan (restricted format).
- A half-yearly meeting of civil society organisations, to assess implementation of the action plan and update it. These half-yearly meetings will be organised in conjunction with the CNCDH (French national consultative commission on Human Rights). NGOs specialising in women's rights in the context of armed conflict that are not members of CNCDH will be included in the debate, and parliamentary women's rights and gender equality delegations will also be closely involved.

3. Exchange of best practices:

In addition to national coordination and consultations, the possibility of exchanges of best practices with other States will be considered. These consultations will take place within the European Union framework (and in particular within the informal working group on women in armed conflict) and will involve third countries that have adopted, or begun to draw up, their own national action plan.

4. Parliamentary oversight of implementation. Implementation of the plan will be discussed in an annual report presented to the relevant Parliamentary committees.

5. Monitoring indicators

The national action plan includes indicators defined within the framework of the European Union. These indicators will be regularly reviewed.

Note on the budget: Given the political and diplomatic nature of certain commitments and the fact that the present action plan makes it possible to coordinate existing policies and programmes, the action plan is not covered by an autonomous budget.

FRANCE'S TABLE OF COMMITMENTS

France's table of commitments is a living document that will be reviewed and updated every year. It identifies the objectives and corresponding indicators as well as a timetable. The ministries and administrations in charge of overseeing implementation of the actions are also identified.

INTERNATIONAL INSTRUMENTS

Resolutions:

S/RES/1325 (2000)

Resolution 1325 (2000) on “Women, Peace and Security” is a basic resolution on the rights of women in armed conflict situations. It affirms, in particular:

- the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and peace building, and calls for greater participation of women in decision-making concerning conflict prevention and resolution
- the need to mainstream a gender perspective into peacekeeping operations
- that all parties to armed conflict must respect fully international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and girls.

S/RES/1820 (2008)

Resolution 1820 (2008) calls for combating sexual violence in armed conflict, which tends to be used as a tactic of war. It notes that sexual violence may constitute a war crime, a crime against humanity or a constitutive act with respect to genocide. It urges States to end impunity for such acts and calls on them to ensure that all victims of sexual violence, particularly women and girls, have equal protection under the law and equal access to justice .

S/RES/1888 (2009)

Resolution 1888 is part of the follow-up to Resolution 1820 on sexual violence in armed conflict. It recalls the responsibility of States to end impunity and prosecute those responsible for sexual violence in armed conflict and expresses the Security Council’s intention to ensure that resolutions to establish or renew peacekeeping mandates contain specific provisions to protect women and children from rape and other forms of sexual violence.

S/RES/1889 (2009)

As part of the follow-up to Resolution 1325, Security Council Resolution 1889 for the first time contains demanding provisions on the health needs of women victims of rape or other forms of sexual violence, particularly in terms of sexual and reproductive health.
